

MY BROTHER'S KEEPER

My Brother's Keeper is a program that former President Barack Obama started in an effort to help young men and boys of color reach their full potential.

Its goal is to connect to young people and mentor, support, and guide them to take important steps to obtain the skills they need to find a good job or go to college and work their way in to the middle class.

At Bishop Hartley we will focus on graduating from high school and preparing for college.

Our goal is to help students stay on track and to successfully develop the skills needed to enter the workforce, post-secondary education or training.

As a group we will also host open discussions about injustice and equality in and outside of the school environment.
